

Wednesday 9 June, 9:45am

#BI21.4 International Trade – Logistics & Distribution

As Businesses look beyond the Pandemic and Brexit, there is a re-start that brings unique opportunities, explores new markets, and innovates. International trade can be an important part of business development, a valuable contribution to the national position. Where does the environment and climate fit in? Are internationally traded goods essential core products, or for luxury markets? How are we moving them? Does our Logistic Infrastructure support environmental thinking as we address the climate emergency and are “Just in time” supply chains a good way forward or part of a problem? Our panel of International trade, Logistics and environmental businesspeople look at the balance between local procurement and the environmental impact.

David Trevelyan

David believes that responsible business is about meeting the values that you and society expects that address the goals of fairness, honesty and sustainable development. His Business, Sustain You, founded in 2017, is a unique consultancy specialising in CSR, Sustainability and Information Security.

Our commitment to responsible business drives our focus on challenging existing business models and delivering long term measurable change.

Book your tickets for this event

<https://international-trade-logistics-distribution.eventbrite.co.uk>